San Francisco, June 25.—The Bulletin this evening will publish a statement of the product of forty principal mines of the Pacific coast for the month of May, the aggregate being: gold $1,922,743, silver $1,925,424, lead [illegible]. Of these mines seven are gold, sixteen silver, thirteen gold and silver and four silver, gold, silver and lead. The product falls below the returns of April by $400 in gold and $425,000 in silver, chiefly due to the reduced production of the bonanza mines.

Kearneyites Seeking Allies.

It is rumored that in anticipation of defeat in the convention the Kearneyites are seeking a coalition with the Democrats, though as yet without success. Some of the disappointed workingmen show a disposition to attribute the success of their opponents to fraud and are [illegible] in consequence.

No Gain to the State.

[illegible] Taylor, the hoodlum who was shot through the head at Saucelito Sunday and [illegible] apparently in a dying condition, is now considered in a fair way of recovery.

Domestic Troubles and Homicide.

[illegible], June 25.—E. G. Luttrell and his wife have resided in Burny valley, in [illegible] county, from the time of their marriage, [illegible] years ago. They have had seven children, six of whom are living. They had accumulated property to the value of $10,000. On the [illegible] of May Luttrell, by his attorney, [illegible] Taylor, of Shasta, filed a complaint for divorce against his wife, charging her with infidelity, and specifying that she had been guilty of incest with their daughter, of [illegible] intercourse with other women, of attempting to poison her, etc., all of which [illegible] denied. Mrs. Luttrell employed [illegible] & Allen of Sacramento, who filed a cross-complaint praying for divorce upon the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment, [illegible], and alleging the truth of the charges made by her against her husband. The case was set for trial before Judge Kimbrough at Shasta on the [illegible]. The case had excited much interest in the neighborhood in which the parties lived. On the 22d of June Mr. Luttrell was in the store of Robert Crews in Burney valley. Crews, his wife and children, and other persons, were in the store. Luttrell told Mrs. Crews he intended to have her as a witness. Mrs. Crews replied that she was not able to go to Shasta. [illegible] said she was, and after some further conversation relative to the case, in which contradictory assertions were made relative [illegible], Luttrell called Mrs. Crews a liar. Luttrell at this time was sitting on the counter with a penknife in his hand. Crews jumped in between Luttrell and said: "I allow no man to call my wife a liar." Luttrell jumped off the counter and struck at Crews with the knife. Crews drew a dirk and stabbed Luttrell in the side. Luttrell ran out of the store and caught up some rocks, but fell [illegible] instantly and died within 40 minutes. The verdict of the coroner's inquest was that the killing was unintentional and in a passion. The examining magistrate held Crews to answer for manslaughter and he was brought to Shasta last night, but admitted to bail in the sum of $1,500, which Crews gave and was released.

Only two Parties Left in the West.

[From the Burlington Hawkeye.]

Curiously enough the inflation greenback movement is dying out in the west and gaining strength in the east. It will make but a poor show in Iowa, Illinois and the western states generally in the autumn elections this year. It shows some strength of organization in New York, Pennsylvania and the New England states. The recent Indiana "National" convention ought to have been composed of 1,975 delegates—less than a third of that number responded to the call, and that largely from the Democratic counties. The greenbackers are no longer a political power in the state. The same state of things is true of Iowa. The late state convention was a failure. The former prominent leaders were absent. In the west there will be this year but two parties.

Closing Scenes in the House.

During the recesses in the early hours of the morning quite a number of members and House employes gathered on the Democratic side of the hall, and made the old chamber ring with "Sweet By and By," "Nearer, My God, to Thee," "Whoa, Emma," "Sweet [illegible]," and a hundred other airs. A mischievous page, unnoticed, during one of these [illegible], took the speaker's chair, and brought the gavel down with such a thud as to instantly stop the hilarity, when he added, with mock solemnity, that there was "too much noise on the right of the chair." It was a long time before the chorus of singers discovered that it was neither the act nor voice of the speaker.

Ice in Diphtheria.

[From the Walla Walla Watchman.]

The family of Judge Waldron, near Weston, was sorely afflicted with that dreadful disease, diphtheria. Among the victims was a grown daughter, who vehemently prayed for ice. The doctors forbid it, and said it would kill her the moment she ate thereof. But when the tender father thought she was dying, and desiring to let her suffer for nothing, resolved to grant her last request, he mounted a horse, came to this city, procured the ice and returned to the bedside of his dying child. She grasped it, eat it like rock candy and after she had her fill she felt better and finally recovered.

THE POTTER INVESTIGATION.

WASHINGTON, June 24.

Mrs. Jenks' testimony yesterday, repeated from memory the letter which the Sherman letter [illegible] she said she had never read it [illegible]. She was employed in the treasury department here [illegible] two months under Bristow. [illegible] the position because it was offered. While employed by the government she went to her desk in the office and did some writing almost every day when she had nothing else to do. [Laughter.]

Q—Now, what were the other papers that you assisted Kellogg Anderson about?

A—I don't know; I never had possession of the Stanley Matthews letters.

Q—Did you know that Anderson had any documents from Matthews at that time?

A—You know how Anderson talks.

Q—Yes, but I want to hear you talk now.

A—Well, I hope you are content.

Q—Did you ever see the document that Anderson said he had from Matthews?

A—No sir. He did not entrust them for my perusal. I never had possession of them. If I had they never would have gone before this committee.

By the chairman:

Q—Was the letter you dictated [illegible] written in ink or lead pencil?

A—In ink.

Q—Was it legible or not when it was finished?

A—That remains for others to discuss. The chirography was not elegant. It never was, but I might have made it out.

Q—Have you ever read any of Sherman's letters?

A—I never have read any of his composition except I have read his speeches as reported in the Congressional Record. I am familiar with most of our statesmen's styles, and if I have read them I think I could imitate them.

Q—Did you try to imitate his style when you dictated the letter?

A—Not his, particularly. It might have done for anyone.

Q—The letter contained this phrase, "your note of even date." Do you use that phrase when you write?

A—Yes, sir, very often. I abbreviate in that way.

General Boynton was called. Q—Have you never used these words in speaking of it: "that the president said Anderson was appointed on account of matters not best to be known"?

A—No, sir; I have not and I want you to understand that I do not propose to make any answer here that will reflect upon the president of the United States.

Q—Why not, if it is the truth?

A—I will tell you why, because I propose to state exactly what took place and not give any half way answers which may reflect upon the president. On the [illegible] of May, when I asked the president if Anderson's commission had been revoked he made the reply that he did not think he would return the office.

Q—Have you said this substantially, that you asked the president how he came to make the appointment of such a man against whom such charges were made, and he said he was possessed of some political secrets. Does he use the words political secrets?

A—No sir, I did not. I am absolutely certain I did not say so to anybody.

Q—Have you given any person whatever to understand that the president said to you or gave you to understand that Anderson was possessed of some political knowledge that it was not best to have made public?

A—No sir and the president did not say any thing of the kind.

Q—By Butler—Haven't you stated to anybody that the president said to you that because Anderson had some knowledge of political affairs in Louisiana that it was necessary, convenient and proper that his appointment should be made?

A—Not to my recollection. I may have conveyed that impression to several people, but as to stating it as the words of the president, I am confident I never have done so.

Q—Have you stated that in substance as what the president said?

A—I may have done so.

Q—Did you state it truly?

A—I stated it truly as it remained in my mind, and I wish to say right here that I repel all insinuations that I have not told the truth at all times, and if necessary, I shall protect myself against such imputations. The other members of the committee have acted as gentlemen towards me, but Gen. Butler has acted the part of a rowdy, and I desire the chairman to call his attention to the fact, and if the committee will not protect me I will protect myself.

WASHINGTON, June 25.

The examination of Mrs. Jenks was resumed to-day. She said she had not yet received the letters inquired for yesterday, and did not know whether they would be of any importance. Witness had seen Mrs. Weber at Hendersonville shortly before leaving for Washington, and Mrs. Weber had told her Anderson had said she (Mrs. Jenks) had received about $10,000 for certain documents, and appeared hurt because she had received no portion of the money. Mrs. Jenks, however, informed Mrs. Weber she had never received any money whatever. General Sheldon had requested witness to visit Mrs. Weber, with a view to having her come to Washington.

Mr. Springer—Is it not a fact that Sheldon wanted Mrs. Weber to come to New Orleans and make affidavit to the effect that there was no such document as the so called Sherman letter in existence?

Witness—No, sir, you are entirely mistaken about that.

Springer inquired if witness received any other consideration from General Sheldon excepting her actual expenses?

Witness, very sharply—No, sir; and as it was but four dollars, you need not distress yourself about it.

Witness was asked by the chairman if she would produce the letters desired to-morrow morning, if they arrived.

A—O yes, if they arrive I will produce them.

Gen. Henry V. Boynton, correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, recalled, and said the president never during their conversation gave him to understand Anderson was in possession of political secrets. He derived the impression entirely from newspapers. General Comly was present during the entire conversation, and heard all including the Anderson matter.

Gen. Butler inquired if witness ever had an interview with any one in Washington regarding Anderson, and had stated that the president had appointed Anderson and others connected with the dirty work in Louisiana, in order to keep their mouths closed.

Gen. Boynton replied he had never talked of the matter in that way to any one. Witness stated in answer to inquiries when the McVeigh commission was appointed, he had conversed with Messrs. Hawley and Harlan both, before they left Washington for New Orleans, and after they had returned.

Gen Butler requested witness to state as nearly as he could all the conversation which transpired between him and these gentlemen concerning the Louisiana commission.

Gen. Boynton said he had no conversation other than pertained to regular newspaper work, and would be pleased to answer any particular question Butler might ask.

Butler—Was there anything said regarding Gen. Harlan's candidacy for the supreme bench?

Witness—Yes, sir; before leaving for New Orleans Gen. Harlan requested me to ascertain if I could, as a favor to him, whether Gen Bristow was a candidate. If he was, he (Harlan) did not desire to stand in his way. Harlan was of the opinion if he went to New Orleans he could aid in bringing about a satisfactory settlement of the very annoying state of affairs then existing and he thought, probably that the transaction would help him in securing a seat upon the supreme bench. That is all that happened in connection with that matter excepting I promised to endeavor to comply with Harlan's request. The conversation was in the office of Gen. Boynton, who informed Harlan he had been absolutely unable to find out definitely either from Bristow or his intimate friends, but that it was believed by us (meaning some of his friends) that Bristow would accept the position were it tendered him. Harlan replied, in effect, that he thought he himself would be a candidate for the position. Gen. Boynton conversed with Gen. Harlan regarding Louisiana matters, mentioning to Harlan at the time that the members of his commission would have to be prepared for investigation, as then Butler's friends in Washington were saying he was not satisfied with the result of the investigation, and that there was a charge that some $15,000 or $16,000 had been used in Louisiana for the purpose of putting the Nicholls government on its feet. Gen. Butler desired to know who his friends were that made such a statement.

Boynton—I cannot name them. The fact was published, as I have stated it, at the time.

Ex-Marshal John R. G. Pitkin, of Louisiana, was sworn and testified that he had conversed with Jas. E. Anderson on the subject of the protest of the parish of East Feliciana, and desired reading a prepared statement in regard to the matter. After discussion it was decided to permit the reading of the statement as part of his sworn testimony, which was to the effect that Anderson swore to the first protest in his (Pitkin's) presence. The second protest, mentioned by Anderson, never existed to his knowledge.

Gen. Butler inquired of Pitkin whether he at any time asked Thos Jenks anything relating to the Sherman letter, to which witness replied it was very likely he had done so. He had never seen a copy of the Sherman letter. He had seen an article in the New Orleans newspapers announcing that Mrs. Jenks had photographed a copy of Sherman's letter, and upon showing her the article she laughed, and remarked in these words, "How little newspapers know." Pitkin then addressed some further inquiry regarding the letter and Mrs. Jenks replied that the letter had never left New Orleans. Whenever he mentioned the letter at all, he mentioned it as the Sherman letter and [illegible] Mrs. Jenks spoke of it as the Sherman letter.

By Sherman—Did you ever meet Anderson in Philadelphia?

A—Yes, sir, once.

Q—Did you go to see him?

A—Well I do not think so. In fact I only was in the North American office in my life.

Q—Do you remember ever having an interview with Senator Conkling with regard to Anderson's protest?

A—Yes sir, I have had several conversations with Conkling.

Q—Sypher was present at the interview in question, was he not?

A—Yes, sir.

Q—Did not Sypher explain the circumstances connected with the [illegible] protest?

A—Yes, Sypher, with his [illegible] of the case, [illegible] Senator Conkling, as well as [illegible].

Q—When Senator Conkling asked you about the blanks in the protest, what did you reply?

A—I replied in substance the same as I have to-day in my prepared statement, that I had no knowledge of the existence of any blanks in the protest.

Q—Did Sypher have the Matthews letters with him at that time?

A—[illegible]

Witness then stated in reply to further questions that there were not many if any of the Democratic [illegible] during the [illegible] and [illegible] that the witnesses were supported by the government.

Witness [illegible] that Harlan did not say in substance that he [illegible] success as a candidate for the supreme bench depended in a large degree upon his success in his Louisiana mission. Harlan said to me: "I know nothing with reference to the use of any money for the purpose of buying up the Packard legislature. [illegible] a member of the commission has any such knowledge. The only thing which I ever heard which would give a possible basis for such a story is this: That just about the time the [illegible] took possession of the Packard men represented that there were certain employes about the Packard legislature who had not received their salaries, and they thought it was a terrible thing that these sums should be paid by the incoming legislature. They went to see about it. He went to persons connected with the Nicholls government and repeated the conversation to them and they said to him a very considerable sum had been raised by the Nicholls men in Louisiana for the purpose of putting the Nicholls government on its feet."

THE INDIAN REVOLT!

An Indian Camp—The Recent Battle.

SILVER CITY, I. T., June 25.—An Indian camp, consisting of a large number of squaws, papooses and old Indians, was recently discovered by [illegible] about twenty-five miles from Camp Lyon, near Three Forks, belonging to the hostiles, but have been left there for safe keeping until battles are finished. Volunteers will probably go out and [illegible] them, if Major Egbert's forces does not. Buffalo Horn was again killed in the Curry creek fight. There is great anxiety to learn more details of Bernard's brave assault upon the savages, near Harney. News is delayed on account of the great distance of the [illegible] from the scene of battle.

Further Particulars of Bernard's Fight.

BOISE CITY, June 25.—A dispatch received here at [illegible] last night states that the advance troops under Col. Bernard consisting of four companies of cavalry, [illegible], Whipple's, McGregor's and Perry's, under Capt. Bendire, overtook the hostiles at 8 A. M. Sunday [illegible] and charged the enemy at a point on Curry creek near Fort Curry, forty-five miles distant from Fort Harney. In this engagement Buffalo Horn, the chief of the Bannacks, is reported killed and also one of the soldiers. After the second charge of the troops the Indians rallied, when Col. Bernard dispatched a courier with a verbal report to Gen. Howard at Harney, asking for reinforcements. The Indians are reported in position on Curry creek, towards which point General Howard immediately started with all the troops of Harney and every available man in that neighborhood. Major Egbert then on his way from Camp Lyon to Harney was ordered to intercept stragglers eastward and to hold himself in readiness for moving rapidly in any direction. Immediately upon receipt of this news a messenger was sent to Gen. Grover, who left this place yesterday morning with Major Sanford's column of cavalry, with directions to hurry forward as soon as possible. This meagre account is all that is known here of the battle which was going on when the messenger left the scene. The force under Col. Bernard, including scouts, numbered about 260 men. The number of Indians is unknown.

Another Outbreak in Idaho.

Jack Campbell, one of General Howard's scouts, arrived here yesterday from Bonanza City in Lemhi county. He reports that on Thursday last the mail carrier between Salmon City and Bonanza brought the intelligence that the Indians belonging to Ten Days' band, of the Bannacks, had murdered the herders of Col. Shoup and others who were herding stock on Camas creek, near Salmon City, about 60 miles distant from Bonanza. Two of the bodies of the murdered men had been found, and there were several others who were missing. This news created intense excitement, and the mines and ranches of that section were being abandoned. Ten Days' band numbers several hundred warriors, belonging nominally to the Lemhi reservation, but having their haunts and hunting grounds among the settlers on the upper Salmon river, and in the adjoining sections of Montana. These Indians have been foraging till discontented. Though professing friendship for the whites, they are now probably all on the war path, which will seriously complicate matters and add to the difficulty of the situation.

Col. John Green arrived here yesterday and to-day assumed formal command of Fort Boise, in compliance with his last orders, but expects to go to the front as soon as he can hear from General Howard. Captain Cushing arrived here this evening, to be stationed here in charge of the commissary and subsistence.

Bloody Work—A Brave Defender—Women and Children Burned to Death.

[Winnemucca Dispatch, 21st June.]

R. W. Wood and C. A. Desaussure, two volunteers, arrived from the front last evening. Before they left McDermit, Piute scouts returned who had been out ten days. Their report was interpreted by Chief Natchez as follows: Part of the hostiles left Stein mountain with the intention of taking Camp Harney, which they learned from the Malheur reservation Indians, who had joined them, has been abandoned by the troops. On their way north they captured ninety cavalry horses which were feeding some distance from camp. They caught the guard, stripped him naked and sent him to camp, with instructions to inform the officers that Chief Egan had the horses, and if they wanted them to come and get them. In their raid through the country they surrounded a house in which several women and children had taken refuge, and which was defended by only one white man. The Indians ordered the inmates to come out. They refused. The Indians then fired the building. The white man shot Chief Egan through the body, but did not kill him. He shot a second Indian in the head, killing him instantly, and severely wounding a third. The house being in flames, its brave defender attempted to escape and was riddled with bullets. The women and children were all burned to death. A party at Green B. Crowley's ranch at Juniper lake, consisting of Crowley, his son, a beef contractor named Scott, from the Malheur reservation, who followed Egan's band to persuade them to return, and the Piute chief Natchez, was surrounded by Indians. They asked Scott to make paper talk what they wanted. They dictated through an interpreter what he should write, and related their grievances at the reservation. When Scott finished writing they took the paper from him and handed it to Crowley to read. They discovered that Scott had not written what they desired him to, and they became very excited and angry. The chief, Egan, stepped up to Scott, and taking hold of his hair, said: "Me have that in my belt heap soon." They were informed by Natchez that the whites would remain at the reservation all night, and they continued to hold a council before killing them. Natchez then advised the whites to go, and he went with them, and they were pursued for miles by the red devils. These savages, some 300 in number, had left the reservation, and their naked bodies were daubed with blood. Chief Egan wore a head dress decorated with the horns of an ox, and nearly all wore feathers in their scalp locks. The Indians told their grievances at the reservation to Scott in the presence of Crowley. They say they had been starved, abused and lied to. They were at times promised pay for their work by Agent Rinehart, but never got a dollar. This statement is corroborated by a Piute known as Charley Thacker, who was interpreter at the reservation, but fled to McDermit when Egan's band went on the war path. It is now evident that as far as is known only the reservation Indians, the Bannacks and Snakes from Fort Hall, and the Lemhis and Piutes, [illegible] McDermit and Weiser from the Malheur reservation, are on the war path.

More Depredations and Murders.

[Silver City Dispatch, June 24.]

The [illegible] road between Boise and Winnemucca is [illegible] of Indians. Several parties came through to-day, and among them young Hamilton, who so narrowly escaped being killed [illegible] the Indians recently at [illegible]. [illegible] Warren [illegible] and fifty other friendly Piutes, who had been in the [illegible] country recently. The Bannacks [illegible] they had [illegible] thirteen [illegible], and [illegible] their own Indians killed. Three white men were killed and burned in a cabin near Stein mountain recently. The Malheur reservation Indians were [illegible] with the Bannacks, [illegible] mares, colts and every animal [illegible]. Hamilton says the Indians who burned the stage were not looking for it. They accidentally came across it. Among the booty obtained was a large roll of greenbacks [illegible]. General Howard is still at Malheur City.

The Attack of Bismarck's Dog on Gortschakoff.

[Tribune's Berlin, June 14.]

During the interview Sunday between Bismarck and Gortschakoff, the large Danish dog of Bismarck made a furious attack upon Gortschakoff, and it was only through the herculean strength of Bismarck that the dog was taken off and the life of Gortschakoff saved. It is stated, in explanation, that when the prince becomes excited in discussion his voice rises, and he stamps his foot. Something of this kind occurred during the interview with Gortschakoff, and the dog, mistaking the eagerness of his master for anger, sprang suddenly at the throat of the Russian diplomatist. Happily Bismarck was as quick as the dog, and had seized and thrown him aside before he had fastened his teeth in the person of the Russian chancellor.

INDIAN HOMESTEADS.

PORTLAND, June 21, 1878.

To the Editor of the Oregonian:

Will you allow me to make one correction in your paper. In an editorial column of Friday you say that "perhaps no patents have been issued by the president to Indian homesteaders on the reservations according to the provisions of the treaties for the reason that its attention has not been called to the subject. The agents on the reservations are [illegible] and [illegible] to see that the treaties of the Indians under the treaty are made complete."

This reflects on the agents who have for four years on the coast been working with all their energy to secure such titles from the president. Long letters have been constantly written, some of which have been published in the reports of the Board of Indian Commissioners. Indians have sent their speeches to Washington through their agents, and surrounding settlers, without regard to politics, and of different ideas on what is the best Indian policy, have forwarded petitions to Washington asking that the same be granted. Inspector E. C. Watkins reported last winter in favor of it, but as yet no patents are granted. This is one reason why many Indians on the reservations feel uneasy. The present treaties say this may be done, and since the president does not do it, a law is asked for granting them, in accordance with Gen. Howard's late dispatch. A [illegible] is reported in the committee on Indian affairs in congress, but nothing further has been done.

WASHINGTON CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION.

Fifth Day.

Pursuant to the mode of proceeding [illegible] constitution adopted by the convention the president appointed the following standing committees:

Committee No. 1—On legislative, judiciary, corporations, schedule, miscellaneous resolutions—Messrs. Dennison, Larrabee, Bradshaw, Gilmore and O'Dell.

Committee No. 2—On executive, administrative finance, state institutions, rights of married women and exemptions, eminent domain and property of the state—Messrs. George, Steward, Andrews, Hannah and Emery.

Committee No. 3—On education, primable boundaries, declaration of rights, distribution of powers, suffrage and elections, amendments—Messrs. Leland, Eldridge, Henry, Wai, and Lacy.

Sixth Day.

The following proposition was submitted by Judge Dennison and referred to the appropriate committee:

"No person in this state shall be denied the right to pursue any lawful occupation, calling or profession, on account of sex, nor shall such right be, in any manner, abridged on account of sex."

Eighth Day.

Judge Dennison presented one relative to common carriers, providing as follows:

"In actions against common carriers of passengers to recover damages for personal injuries occasioned by negligence on the part of the carriers, slight contributory negligence on the part of the person injured shall not constitute a defense, but the damages shall be apportioned according to the degree of fault."

The learned member of the bar also presented the following propositions relative to

NAVIGABLE WATERS.

1. All navigable waters within the state shall be and remain public highways, free to all citizens of the state and of the United States, without tax, impost or charge, and no tax, wharfage or charge shall be demanded or received from the owner of any merchandise or commodity, for the use of the shores or any wharf erected on the shores, or in or over the waters of any navigable stream, unless the same be expressly authorized by law.

2. No navigable stream in this state shall be bridged, dammed or obstructed by any person or corporation without the authority of law.

Also the following propositions relative to the RIGHTS OF HUSBAND AND WIFE.

1. All property, both real and personal, of the wife, owned by her before marriage, and that acquired afterwards by gift, devise, or descent, shall be her separate property, and upon her death shall descend to her heirs at law, unless otherwise disposed of during her life time, in such manner as may be prescribed by law.

2. [Same as to the husband.]

3. All property acquired after the marriage by husband and wife, or either, except such as may be acquired separately by gift, devise, or descent, shall be common property, and upon the death of either shall descend, subject to the community debts, to the survivor and the surviving children of each, and of both, in equal parts.

4. Laws shall be passed relieving married women from the common law disabilities of coverture, and plainly defining their rights to make and enforce contracts relating to their separate property and personal rights.

5. Tenancy in dower and tenancy by courtesy shall not exist.

6. Laws shall also be passed clearly defining the rights of husband and wife, during marriage, and providing the manner in which the common and separate property may be controlled, encumbered and disposed of during marriage, and providing for their equal rights in the possession of their children.

7. The separate property of the wife shall not be liable for the debts, obligations, and engagements of her husband, and may be devised or bequeathed by her as if she were unmarried.

Mr. Hannah submitted a proposition providing for the sale of swamp and tide lands, the proceeds to be used in the construction of the state house, penitentiary and insane asylum.

Valley Forge Centennial.

[Special Telegram, June 19.]

The centennial anniversary celebration of the evacuation of this place by the Continental army was held to-day under circumstances of unusual display and in the presence of 50,000 people. At daylight cannon were fired and bells rung throughout Schuylkill valley. At sunrise there was a salute of thirteen guns, and at 8:30 Governor Hartranft and Adjutant General Latta, accompanied by General Winfield S. Hancock and other distinguished persons, arrived, and were received by the military. At 9 o'clock the memorial service procession was formed at the military headquarters, and the graves of Continental and Federal soldiers were decorated. Appropriate services were held, and the procession moved over the intrenchments which have remained since the occupation of the place by the Continental army, and over the historic ground, which was strewn with flowers by the ladies. A grand chorus of 700 voices rendered an anthem, and then General Hancock and Governor Hartranft reviewed the military, 2,000 in number.

THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

[illegible]

[illegible] At the request of [illegible] to address you upon this occasion, I shall improve the opportunity to say a few words to you upon the subject of MANNERS.

I stand before you [illegible] without apology. Whatever I undertake to do I generally take the time to do, as well as I can. But in this instance circumstances beyond my control have prevented my having the preparation that I desired and therefore I bespeak your kindly consideration for what I shall say. At all events, and for the reason suggested, I shall at least be brief.

Manners, says Burke, "are of more importance than laws. Upon them in a great measure the laws depend. The law touches us but here and there and now and then. Manners are what vex or soothe, corrupt or purify, exalt or debase, barbarize or refine us, by a constant, steady, uniform, insensible operation, like that of the air we breathe in. They give their whole form and color to our lives. According to their quality, they aid morals, they supply them or they totally destroy them."

The value of learning and ability is doubtless appreciated by all of you. Your devotion to the former, and your possession of the latter is fully evidenced by the fact that you have been found worthy of the honors conferred upon you to-day by the University of Oregon.

But neither learning nor ability will so surely or readily secure to you the good will and esteem of mankind as good manners. While I concede at the outset that your end and aim in life should be something nobler and higher than the mere favor of the world, yet in your intercourse with it you will do well to keep [illegible] promise in view and "[illegible] the observance of civility," and thereby repress and dispense that pride and selfishness which is incompatible with the comfort and pleasure of others. Speaking of learning, Montaigne says: "All other knowledge is hurtful to him who has not the science of honesty and good nature." Now good nature, kindness of heart, is the well spring of good manners, and we have the authority of this modern moralist for even preferring manners to learning.

That eminent and worthy patron of learning in the fourteenth century, William of Wykeham, the founder of Winchester school and New College at Oxford, and who rose from social poverty and obscurity to be the architect and builder of Windsor castle, bishop of the royal city of Winchester, and [illegible] chancellor of England, being [illegible] of a uniform consideration for the feelings of others, chose for his motto, "Manners makyth man." [illegible]

Few young persons are aware how much their success and happiness will depend upon their manners. First impressions are among the most lasting, and the nature of these depends almost wholly upon the manners of the person impressing. When you come in contact with anyone for the first time an impression of pleasure and [illegible] is apt to follow, and this is largely the result of his personal bearing [illegible]. In a person with the most elegant attire and showy attainments, as soon as he opens his mouth, you may justly exclaim, "Thy speech betrayeth thee." The speech may be even sensible and learned, but the tone and accent [illegible] may plainly suggest a want of cultivation and familiarity with good society and an early association with uncouth and uneducated people. The dress may be rich and stylish, but it may be inappropriate to the occasion, and awkwardly worn. In such case the demeanor of the wearer is not in harmony with his wardrobe and discloses an unfamiliarity with the uses and habits of genteel apparel.

But you may think that dress and speech are of too little importance to occupy my time or engage your attention upon this occasion. Now, I admit that these are not weighty matters, but still they are not to be overlooked by those who are trying to furnish themselves thoroughly for the voyage of life. Indeed, some one has justly said, that a man is known in this world, principally by his dress and address.

Good manners also include cleanliness and neatness of person as well as fitness of speech and dress. What learning and ability can excuse slovenly dress and unclean [illegible]? How often [illegible] the usefulness of a person of marked ability or attainments is diminished or destroyed on account of some disgusting habit or filthy practice.

True, there are times and circumstances in the lives of all of us, and in some more than others, in which it is impossible to keep altogether clear of the dust and grime of our occupations and surroundings. But the fresh and honest marks of honest and useful labor are neither an excuse for nor to be compared with the state of filthiness and slovenliness that comes from continued neglect of the person and habitual indifference to dress. Nor does labor or occupation of any ordinary kind prevent a considerable degree of cleanliness and neatness on public and holy days when the persons engaged in it are taking recreation or attending places of public business or worship.

And this reminds me, that we hear much in these noisy times concerning the honor and dignity of labor, but mostly, so far as my observation goes, from those who do the least or none of it. The worth and usefulness of labor cannot be disputed, but so long as by far the greater number must necessarily toil for plain food and clothes at best, labor cannot be called honorable, in any proper sense of the word. An honor, if it is anything, is a reward bestowed in some way by society for unusual attainments or distinction in some calling, pursuit or vocation, and its value depends upon its rarity and the difficulty in obtaining it. But if all persons, or the greater number of them, who follow a calling, pursuit or vocation, are therefore honorable, then honors are so far abolished, and all are on a common, dead level of monotonous equality, where from the very nature of things there can be no honors.

Yet there is a grain of comparative truth at the bottom of this otherwise hollow clamor. Labor, however irksome or unremunerative, is honorable compared with idleness. Labor produces. Idleness only consumes. The existence and progress of the race depend upon the former, while the latter is a consuming moth, forever fretting away the garment and fabric of society. But cleanliness and neatness make labor attractive, while filth and slovenliness tend to the contrary and thereby debase it. As the progress of civilization has elevated and improved the condition of persons engaged in the ruder and more repulsive forms of human labor, their manners have improved, particularly in the matter of cleanliness of person and neatness and attractiveness of apparel. Other things being equal, as the manners of the laborer are—including his personal appearance and habits—so will he be regarded by society. This rule of action is founded deep in human nature and will never change. No combination or fiats of philanthropists or revolutionists can ever alter it—and it is well that it is so.

In parts of Europe and Asia the peasantry still live under the same roof and often in the same room with their domestic animals, and the members of the family are huddled together at night without regard to sex or condition. Between these and the people who have learned to provide separate compartments for the sexes and dwellings for themselves and their horses, cattle and hogs, there is a great improvement in manners and a corresponding elevation in their calling and position in life.

Whatever, then, may be said of the dignity of labor in the abstract, the fact remains that those who labor will always in a great measure be esteemed and treated according to their manners. The rude and repulsive will not be regarded as favorably and kindly as those who have learned that the senses are the direct avenues to the heart and affections, and that whoever is offensive to the one is for that reason denied a favorable admittance to the other.

But the phase of manners to which I particularly wish to call your attention is that which concerns your conduct towards others—what we commonly call politeness or civility.

The essence of politeness is the preference of others to ourselves in non-essentials—self denial in little things. The practice of this politeness leads to the repression of self in the presence of others who are thereby propitiated and pleased. It is a conventional or mimic humility whereby for the time being we voluntarily subordinate ourselves to others and pro re nata admit a better right or a greater merit on their parts. In this respect it corresponds with the Apostolic precept: "In lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves."

Politeness has been well defined by no less a person than the great Commoner of England as "benevolence in trifles or the preference of others to ourselves in little daily, hourly occurrences in the commerce of life. A better place, a more commodious seat, priority in being helped at table, etc., what is it but sacrificing ourselves in such trifles to the convenience and pleasure of others? And this constitutes true politeness. It is a perpetual attention, by habit it grows easy and natural to us, to the little wants of those we are with, by which we either prevent or remove them."

Again he says: "Bowing, ceremonious, formal compliments, stiff civilities, will never be politeness; that must be natural, unstudied, manly, noble. And what will give this but a mind benevolent, and perpetually attentive to exert that amiable disposition in trifles towards all you converse and live with?" Benevolence in greater matters takes a higher name and is the queen of virtues.

Burke, with his usual and unrivaled felicity of expression and fitness and exactness of knowledge, has aptly and beautifully characterized politeness as "[illegible] which we cover the defects of our naked, shivering nature and raise it to dignity in our own estimation."

Bacon, the great advocate of utility and convenience in human intercourse and affairs, in his essay concerning "Ceremonies and Respects," says: "Not to use ceremonies at all is to teach others not to use them again, and so diminish respect to himself."

Franklin, the evangelist of prudence and self, tells us in his charming way in his autobiography what advantage he gained by cultivating, much against his natural inclination, a modest, pleasant manner in conversation and intercourse with others, which at length became easy and habitual to him, so that, as he says, "perhaps for the last fifty years no one has ever heard a dogmatical expression escape me."

The great moralist, Dr. Johnson, whose precept upon this point is better than his example, declares that: "A man has no more right to say an uncivil thing to another man than to knock him down."

Sidney Smith, the witty Edinburgh Reviewer and Parson, says: "Manners are the shadows of virtues; the momentary display of those qualities which our fellow creatures love and respect."

Emerson, the New England Idealist, says: "Society will pardon much to genius and special gifts, but being in its nature a convention, it loves what is conventional, or what belongs to coming together. That makes the good and bad of manners, namely, what helps or hinders fellowship. For fashion is not good sense absolute but relative; not good sense private, but good sense entertaining company. It hates corners and sharp points of character, hates quarrelsome, egotistical, solitary and gloomy people; hates whatever can interfere with the total blending of parties; whilst it values all peculiarities as in the highest degree, refreshing which can consist with good fellowship."

Upon the authority of these great and widely scattered names, as well as from the nature of the case, it is evident that manners are a very important part of an education. Without good manners the scholar is a mere pedant, the wit degenerates into a buffoon and courage appears as brutality. Air and manner are far more effective than words or deeds, and in the long run you will find that the French proverb—"Le style c'est l'homme"—is founded upon a pretty wide experience.

The great respect and reverence which Washington received from his contemporaries was due as much to his polite and dignified manners as to his great abilities and achievements. His intimacy with the intelligent and cultivated family of William Fairfax at Belvoir, in Virginia, during his youth probably did much for him in this respect. While there he compiled a code of morals and manners for his own government. The manuscript in his hand writing still exists, and is entitled, "Rules for Behavior in company and conversation." It is said of this "Code," that although "so quaint and formal as almost to provoke a smile, in the main a better manual could not be put into the hands of youth."

An instance is told of his politeness while his army was camped near Morristown, which may better illustrate his "Rules of Behavior in Company" than any gloss of mine. One day he attended a religious meeting in the open air, where a chair had been placed for his use. Just before the service commenced, a woman approached with a child in her arms, but there was no vacant seat. Washington—the commander in chief of the armies of the United States immediately rose and placed this poor woman in his chair and remained standing during the whole service. Even—

"Friendship's mysterious cement of the soul, Sweet'ner of life and solder of society" is destroyed by neglect and rudeness, but nourished and preserved by politeness. Familiarity is said to breed contempt, which is but another way of saying that the continued wear and tear of neglect and rudeness, in trifles, will in time destroy friendship itself. How much friendship is lost in peril by the want of politeness, and to what extent its continuance depends upon the manners of the parties, is very happily suggested in the following stanzas:

The man who hails you Tom or Jack,
And proves by thumps upon your back
How he esteems your merit,
Is such a friend that one had need
Be very much his friend indeed,
To pardon or to bear it.

As similarity of mind
Or something not to be defined,
First fixes our attention;
So manners decent and polite,
The same we practiced at first sight
Must save it from declension.

True politeness is based upon benevolence and unselfishness. Politeness to others is always in some measure a denial of self, and self denial is the distinguishing mark between savagery and civilization—the voluptuary and the temperate—the criminal and the virtuous.

Sir Walter Scott has said: "Teach self denial and make its practice pleasurable, and you create for the world a destiny more sublime than ever issued from the brain of the wildest dreamer. * * * There never did and never will exist anything permanently noble and excellent in character which was a stranger to the exercise of resolute self denial."

Now, when you promote the convenience and comfort of others in little things in preference to your own, you are so far practicing this self denial which is politeness. In return for the courtesy and kindness shown to others you are yourself improved and elevated in feeling. Indeed, the habit of self denial is necessarily implied in the Commandments of the second table as epitomized in the Sermon on the Mount—"Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself"—for how can this injunction be obeyed without continually exercising self denial, even in the "little, daily, hourly occurrences in the commerce of life." And this self denial—this benevolence in trifles—constitutes as we have seen the true politeness. This is in truth "the decent drapery of life," woven from the teachings and example of all those who have helped to refine and elevate the race, and wherewithal we "cover the defects of our naked shivering nature," and make human society not only tolerable but altogether lovely.

Among those whose example has notably contributed to this result may be mentioned Sir Philip Sidney—the poet, scholar, soldier, statesman and gentleman—who, notwithstanding his distinguished career in all these respects, is to-day best known by an act of politeness which will scarce be forgotten while the language lasts in which it is embalmed.

The story is briefly this: Being borne seriously wounded from the field under the walls of Zutphen, where with a small detachment of English troops, he had signally defeated 3,000 Spaniards, marching to the relief of the place, and being thirsty from the loss of blood he called for water, which being brought to him he was about to drink when seeing a poor dying soldier who was being carried by cast a longing glance at the cup, he took the cooling draught untasted from his lips and delivered it to the soldier, saying, "Thy necessity is yet greater than mine."

Gentle and generous knight! Preux Chevalier of the sixteenth century! This cup of cold water, given in self denial to the dying trooper, will be remembered to thy praise when even thy feats of bravery and learning are forgotten.

We stand here to-day at the opening of a new era in Oregon. A class of young men and women are about to graduate from the university of the state. The first diplomas bearing the broad seal of Universitas Oregonia and the signatures of its worthy faculty are already delivered to them. The munificent gift from the nation to the state for the purpose of promoting the higher education in Oregon, and the labors and contributions of those who have endeavored to make the same effective, are now beginning to bear fruit. You, my young friends, are the first fruits of this tree of learning. As such, we offer you to the country as an acknowledgment of the obligation we are under for the means of establishing and maintaining this school and as an earnest of the future. We trust you are the beginning of a long and ever widening line of useful and distinguished men and women, who shall go forth year by year from this place to engage in the duties of life and disseminate the learning and cultivation obtained here. On the farm, in the workshop, and in business, in the school, the hospital and the ministry, at the bar and in the legislative halls they will be found doing good service to the country and honor to their Alma Mater, and illustrating the truth of her motto, Mens agitat Molem.

As the first graduates of this school you are under some peculiar obligations to it and those who shall follow you. Remember, that the path you shall make others for that reason, may walk in. Bear in mind, that for the time being, you are the standard bearers of the University that has honored you with the first place upon its rolls and made you the eldest of its sons and daughters. Keep your banners on high and unfurled and lead the well meaning but fickle and short sighted multitude through the wilderness of ignorance and error to the Canaan of knowledge and truth. Wherever you go maintain learning and respect for law and social order. Do what you can to restrain the strong and protect the weak, to uphold the right and put down the wrong. But withal, keep yourself in subjection and be considerate of others—practice self denial and politeness. In a word cultivate good manners and you will not only do much to make life agreeable but to promote the growth of the higher virtues of which manners are the crowning grace and ornament.

[illegible] NEW POLICY

It [illegible] that much of the [illegible] quiet [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] that they [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] anxious [illegible] with the whites are looking [illegible] these lands [illegible] eyes and they have heard that [illegible] have been made both here and at Washington to remove them from their present situations. None of them are willing to [illegible] [illegible] the upper Columbia headed by [illegible] has [illegible] the settlers and [illegible] military authorities [illegible] yet it is apparent that this band will remain at peace [illegible] But they are kept in continual excitement by a fear that they will lose their lands and be taken to a reservation and it is highly probable that before they would submit to this they would fight. We are assured that the Indians at Warm Springs and [illegible] are equally averse to removal from those places, and perhaps can not be induced to entertain such proposition at all. By this talk of taking the lands they now occupy, which they consider were solemnly guaranteed to them the Indians are filled with suspicions and dissatisfaction. It is a menace which should be withdrawn.

The way out of this difficulty is to allot them lands in severalty under existing laws and sell the balance of lands for their benefit. Stop dealing with them at once in their collective or tribal capacity, and make every individual amenable to law on his own account. Establish the doctrine of the individual responsibility of each, and pay no attention to their tribal relations. Present to them the same motives for action the same hopes of advancement and fear of punishment that are addressed to the whites. And strictly enforce the law of justice whether it come with reward or penalty.

We have shown heretofore that the laws as they now stand make provision for Indian homesteads and Indian citizenship. The problem of [illegible] solution is the successful development of this plan. We may quiet the Indians around us by ceasing to talk of depriving them of their lands and by confirming them in secure and permanent possession. Instead of keeping them constantly on the verge of revolt by these menaces to their title to the lands they occupy let us adopt the policy of parceling out the lands to them to be held in severalty and selling the surplus for their use and advantage. Then by ignoring the authority and existence of the tribe and making them amenable as other individuals to the general law we shall take means to rid them of the distinctive Indian character, and as the white population grows they will be swallowed up in the general body of people, and the country will be freed of alien tribes maintaining a sort of independence and ready at any time to engage in hostile enterprises. The solution will be found in gradually inclosing the Indians within the limits of the states and causing the federal relation to them to be withdrawn.

OUR COMMERCE WITH CHINA

With a view of correcting exaggerated notions of the importance of our commerce with China the New York Herald presents a statement of its amount during the last twenty years, together with an exhibit of the whole foreign commerce of the Chinese empire for 1876. From the tables it appears that the average value of our commerce with China has been for twenty years but $22,108,026 per annum. For the last five years of the twenty its annual value has been $30,618,695. How small a part of the whole foreign commerce of the United States this is will appear from the statement that the entire value of that commerce is $1,500,000,000 a year. Our trade with China is far less important than that with Canada, Cuba or Brazil. It further appears that the foreign trade of China for the year 1876 was but $219,000,000 or only one seventh that of the United States. From this it is rightly deduced that other elements than that of population are necessary to afford a basis for profitable trade.

England controls the larger part of the commerce with China, her share being many times greater than our own. In 1876 England and her dependencies exported to China commodities valued at $153,000,000, while exports from the United States to that country amounted to only $10,526,000 and of this a large part was specie. England exported to China in 1876 cotton goods worth $28,167,250. Our shipments of cotton goods during the same time amounted only to the value of $833,513. The value of tea imported into the United States from Japan last year was considerably greater than the value of that imported from China.

It appears hence that our trade with China has not the great value that might be supposed from the rather exceptional prominence that is given it. Existence of this trade does not depend on the presence of the great numbers of Chinese now in our Pacific states, nor is its growth contingent on that fact. England gets the Chinese trade and we get the Chinese people. It is a division more favorable to England's interests than to our own.

CALIFORNIA ELECTION

Pretty general returns are received of the election held last week in California for members of the constitutional convention. The Kearneyites carried all their candidates in San Francisco by about five thousand majority. This result was a consequence of the division among other classes. The non partisan ticket was strong, but the other two tickets, the straight Republican and straight Democratic, drew from it just enough to let the Kearneyites in. The latter also carried a few interior counties, but not enough to give them control of the convention. From returns received the Sacramento Record Union thinks that, out of 152 members in all, 85 are non partisans, 49 are workingmen, [illegible] are Republicans and [illegible] are Democrats, leaving four unclassified. It says the various anti Kearney elements will have 103 votes in the convention and therefore there is no danger that Kearney [illegible] will [illegible] away with the new constitution. The state [illegible] has been saved from a communistic triumph by the people of the interior and [illegible] by them alone. The voters of San Francisco have committed political suicide.

The last number of the Am[illegible] Quarterly [illegible] contains an [illegible] on secret societies in the United States. It emphasizes the well known opposition of the Ca[illegible] [illegible] with some of the struggles [illegible] with these organizations [illegible] membership. In particular [illegible] upon Fenianism, the leaders of which [illegible] times have managed to live for years on the subscriptions of their dupes. The [illegible] [illegible] it pronounces a [illegible] pretence.

at conspiracy. It is plain language is used. Its inner history is that of the average life insurance company or savings bank. It was [illegible] in which [illegible] exceedingly cheap [illegible] is stole cash [illegible] an army in which every officer who was not a dupe deserved a more uncomplimentary name, and where no officer rated lower than a colonel. The article deals in [illegible] view with the Molly Maguires.

[illegible] new paper [illegible] bring [illegible] great [illegible] achieved by their government in the congress and the deep humiliation [illegible] they allege [illegible] [illegible] New York Herald says this course is taken to [illegible] the way for [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] with the glamour of artificial [illegible] as a diplomatist by making him appear [illegible] at the congress. The concessions are [illegible] in substance but are held back [illegible] over up [illegible] treat from the position [illegible] [illegible] taken up in Salisbury's circular. Two or three minor points conceded in principle by Russia were thus purposely left aside after Russia had got England's consent to the really important portion of her demands, so that they might be recorded at the Berlin congress and hailed as great diplomatic triumphs for Beaconsfield.

A few days since Secretary Sherman issued a circular calling attention to the four per cent loan as a popular investment. All persons are invited to aid in placing these bonds and can make their arrangements through the national bank for depositing the purchase money. The proceeds will be used for the redemption of six per cent bonds under the funding act. Sale of the four per cents enables government to save one third of the interest now paid on an equal amount of the outstanding debt. The secretary says: "These bonds should be the storehouse for the savings of the people. No facility or advantage will be given to large subscribers. It is the interest of the public that the bonds be distributed in small sums among the largest number of our fellow citizens."

Washington correspondence of the Sacramento Record Union in reviewing the work of the late session of congress from a Pacific coast standpoint classes the Northern Pacific bill with the measures which go over till next winter with greatly diminished chances of becoming laws. It has been apparent all the time that the late session was our real opportunity. That chance lost in consequence of the obstacles thrown in the way by a senator who ought to have aided it and was in position to aid it the probability is strong that it will not be again presented.

The Chicago Inter Ocean says the cost of gas used in lighting the streets of that city is about $400,000 per year. The cost of lighting the city with electric candles is estimated at $50,000 per year, the light being in every respect superior to gaslight. A proposition has been made to the authorities in Pittsburg to light that city with electric lights for seventeen years free of charge other than the utilization of the present lamp posts for advertising purposes by the parties undertaking the contract.

Just before adjournment the house of representatives turned a back somersault on the greenback question. It refused to assent to the bill to allow duties to be paid in greenbacks after October 1st, or to permit greenbacks to be converted [illegible] bonds.

The sum of $300,000 has been appropriated for public land surveys in all the states and territories during the next fiscal year. The smallness of the appropriation for so large a service renders it almost valueless.

Congress has appropriated $100,000 to build a military post on the northern frontier of Montana.

OREGON

Mr and Mrs A C Huntington of La Grande lost two children from diphtheria last week.

The common council of Salem has passed an ordinance reinstating the hook and ladder company of that place in the fire department.

A young man named Russel was arrested at Milton, Umatilla county, recently on a charge of perjury, he having sworn falsely in regard to the age of a daughter of Mr Cyrus Owens for the purpose of obtaining a marriage license for the girl and a young man named Johnson. He was held to answer in the sum of $200.

Salem Mercury: From all parts of this valley we learn that the prospect for the late sown wheat is very discouraging. Unless rain comes within a few days there will be much of the grain not worth the cutting. Mr A Stefarth who resides near Zena in Polk county called on us yesterday and informed us that with the exception of the fall wheat there will be very little cut in that vicinity and about Bethel and Lincoln.

WASHINGTON TERRITORY

A big deposit of ice has been found in the Olympic mountains and the Dispatch says it can be brought to Seattle at a cost of $5 a ton. Ice now costs $80 a ton there.

Messrs Shattuck & Blair interested jointly in the Seattle coal mine need more tonnage and the former has gone east to purchase two or three additional vessels.

At the last meeting of the common council of Seattle a resolution was passed authorizing the mayor to correspond with the manufacturers of steam fire engines with a view to the purchase of a machine.

A correspondent of the Walla Walla Union is authority for the statement that Rev. David Sires of Seattle, will probably take charge of the Universalist Church of Dayton. Rev. McAllister is going to Lewiston and Colfax.

The Seatco Coal Company is now composed of four gentlemen, namely, Wm Billings, Thomas Heacock, F R Brown and Samuel Coulter. They are proceeding with the development of the mine with all possible speed, and when developed will use in its working the convict labor of the territory, for which Mr Billings is contractor.

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE .. 1878

CITY.

SMUGGLERS ARRESTED — Two brothers named James and Thomas M.. were arrested yesterday morning by the custom house officials, charged with the crime of smuggling opium These men were passengers on the steamer .. which ... and were apprehended by the officers About 50 pounds of the narcotic drug were found in their possession when arrested Both men after being arrested were turned over to the custody of the U S Marshal and yesterday afternoon had a preliminary examination before U S Commissioner Gleason In answer to the charge the defendants confessed their guilt. Each was held to await the action of the grand jury in the sum of $500 Failing to furnish the required bonds the defendants were committed to the county jail The accused, it seems had entered into a contract with some Chinese with opium at $12 per pound They had an opportunity to purchase 50 pounds at Victoria at $10 per pound, and brought it over to this place hoping thus to realize a handsome profit But before they get free from the clutches of the law they will assuredly realize to their sorrow that it was a very bad investment

DISEASE—DEATH—DESTITUTION —We have heard of a deplorable case of sickness death and destitution which certainly commends itself in the strongest manner possible to the sympathies of the community Near the car shops reside a family named Moddy Recently two of their children fell sick with a disease known as black tongue and soon after died Three children who remain are all down with the same malignant disease, and their recovery is deemed hopeless. The family, it is reported is in utter destitution—having nothing at all to eat The disease is said to be contagious, and for that reason the father is restrained from leaving the house, and the neighbors are afraid to go near. This is certainly a most deserving case, and one that should receive prompt attention. Articles of clothing or food left at the gate a short distance in front of the house will be all that is required, as they can be sent and carried away by the parents

THE RETIRING JAILER —We understand that Mr. James Barry has been appointed jailer by Ben Norden the newly elected sheriff, in place of Eli Morrill resigned Mr Barry will enter upon the duties of the position on the first of July Mr Morrill has filled the position of jailer for nearly three years efficiently and in a satisfactory manner During his administration Mr Morrill has had altogether 986 prisoners under his charge. He has been complimented by every grand jury report, and there have been ... during his term of office, which ... only be a source of gratification to him. Only two prisoners have effected an escape from the jail during the time Mr Morrill has had personal charge of it—Palmer and Smith. At present only 7 prisoners are confined in the jail.

WILLAMETTE UNIVERSITY —Studies will be resumed at this old and deservedly popular institution of learning on Monday September 2, 1878. The faculty for the coming school year, will be composed of the following gentlemen and ladies Prof Thos M Gatch, president, Prof Geo H Collier mathematics and natural science Miss Li.. J. Chamberlin, preceptress, Mrs. Joseph ..., academical department, Mrs. Ella ..., teacher of instrumental music All desired information can be obtained by addressing Mr. J. A. Stratton agent or Prof ...

TAKEN TO SALEM.—Last evening the deputy sheriff of Wasco county, arrived in this city having in custody an old man about 50 years of age named Joseph Hilderbrook He was tried and convicted for the crime of rape at the last term of the circuit court and sentenced to five years imprisonment in the penitentiary, The prisoner will be taken to Salem this morning.

BURGLARIZED — Saturday night the residence of Mr. Charles Burns, in East Portland was entered by burglars during the absence of that gentleman The thieves ransacked the building from basement to attic, searching for valuables. However the only article taken was a revolver and $5 in money Charley is inclined to consider himself in luck

OFFICER REINSTATED —Last evening a regular meeting of the board of police commissioners was held. An investigation of the charges preferred against officer Elwanger who it will be remembered was suspended some days ago), was made, which resulted in the reinstatement of that officer. No other business of importance was transacted

PASSENGERS.—The steamer California on her last trip to this port brought the following passengers Mrs. J M. Vanderbilt two children and nurse, Mrs. J W Griffith child and nurse, J. J. Fegan, W K Ish W K ..., Capt. T. Eay, A A Cohn C W Holt, I. Hodge, D. Oliva, and 12 others

HORSE THIEF ARREST—A man was arrested last evening at the east side depot immediately on the arrival of the train from the south by officer Kelly and locked up in the city jail. The prisoner is wanted by the sheriff of Siskiyou county, Cal., who will probably arrive on to-morrow's train

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH CONCERT.

The concert for the benefit of the organ fund of the church last night proved sufficiently attractive to completely fill the church The initial number of the programme was set down for "The North ... Band," but served to introduce only four performers. Miss Miller followed and sang nicely ... "When the Tide Comes In" The duet for organ and piano by Messrs Wallace and Breen was rather mixed after which Mr Kinross favored us with Hatton's famous song "The Miner" The audience vociferously demanded its repetition and the gentleman gracefully responded Our old friend Mr Plummer gave us an imitation of Mark Twain in "The Coyote," so characteristically that the audience seemed loth to let him retire ... "Madre del Somo Amore" by Campana ... fairly rendered save that it seemed a trifle high for the leading soprano The March by a ... quartette suffered much by the organ accompaniment. "The Bird Carol," by Miss Mil... was redemanded and Professor Kay played with much feeling a selection from "Stradella" ... the possessor of an almost phenomenal ... essayed a little too much in "Ah Forse lui." We have before had occasion to remark the ... timbre of this young lady's voice and ... that there is among us a first class vocal teacher there can be nothing in the way of her becoming, if not the best of our local soprani The ... of Mrs. Smith was also warmly applauded and altogether the concert was a thoroughly enjoyable one.

THE LARGEST CASTING YET MADE IN OREGON

It will be remembered that several months ago ... [illegible] ... Dalles ... the steamer ... the new ... Harlan & Hollingsworth ... [illegible]

[illegible] ... from Wilmington ... But here came the ... another break ... it would be useless until the great season had expired and Jack Frost ... spoke up and said he did not see why Portland ... not cast it as well as Wilmington A day later and a contract to cast it at the Willamette Iron Works was let for the modest sum of ... thousand dollars That foundry had turned out ... ordinary steam engines of sixteen inches diameter at six feet stroke, but the present casting was entirely a different undertaking There was ... about ... The diameter was twenty eight inches by eight feet stroke of the piston thus making .. inches of steam surface as the interior dimension

THE OUTER DIMENSION

Of the casting, will be at one nine and a half feet in length by nearly four feet in diameter, ... the ... flanges by which the cylinder is bolted to the bed plates Its total weight when cold will be about ... pounds and to make a successful casting it was necessary to smelt some 8,000 pounds of metal James Oman Esq superintendent of the foundry informed our reporter that he would cast the cylinder at .. o'clock last evening Our man was promptly on hand and was informed that half an hour later the cylinder would be cast as the metal was fusing very slowly An immense crowd was gathering about the doors while a corps of swarthy forge hands were darting hither and thither and shouting vociferously Two huge kettles one containing ... pounds and the other containing 200 ... were swung round by the ponderous cranes and a stream of liquid fire darted from the furnace doors ... At last the word was given ... the earth ... [illegible]

A ... SIGHT

It was indeed The heat was overpowering and the glare was fairly blinding While the laborers emptied the ladles men stood behind them and held hats before their eyes to keep them from being ... Our man was directly over on the second story and bawled out more hat as the ... flash of molten metal met his gaze At 8:30 the mould was full and the liquid fire changed from a white heat to a dull and lurid red ... the workmen went home to supper This casting should be given at least thirty six hours to cool to prevent its cracking It certainly was conducted in a (admirable shape) there being no confusion or undue ... but the affair but everything moved with wonderful rapidity On Thursday ... the pit will be broken and the cylinder exhumed It must then be cleaned from earth mould and ... be ... for use That will probably employ at least twenty days longer This was the largest casting ever made in Oregon and the largest high pressure cylinder ... on the coast it is by no means the largest cylinder on the Pacific coast however The

STEAMSHIP ARIZONA

Of the Pacific Mail line broke her cylinder at sea in December 1872 and a new one was cast for her at the Risdon Iron Works in San Francisco Its dimensions were 1.. inches diameter by twelve feet stroke of piston being more than five times as large It was very defective from bad venting however and had to be bushed with brass in many places on the inside However it lasted longer than the ship did and was as good as new when she was broken up The largest steamboat casting ever made in America is believed to be the cylinder of the steamer John L Stephens well known here in former days It is 8 inches diameter by 10 feet stroke but being an oscillator the trunnions on which it rocked had to be cast in the same piece and made it heavier than many cylinders of greater interior dimensions Though the job completed at the Willamette Iron Works last night is inferior to the above in size yet we predict it will be finished in such a style as will show first class workmanship We have written this article up at unusual length to show how the commerce of Portland has grown in the past few years and how her local industries have been forced to expand in a corresponding ratio

WEDNESDAY MORNING, JUNE 26, 1878.

AN ACADEMIC POEM.

At the one hundredth anniversary of Phillips Academy, at Andover, Mass., celebrated on the 6th June, Dr. O. W. Holmes read a poem, of which the following is the conclusion:

Time works strange marvels; since I trod the green
And swung the gates, what wonders I have seen!
But come what will—the sky itself may fall—
As things of course the boy accepts them all.
The prophet's chariot drawn by steeds of flame,
For daily use our traveling millions claim;
The race we lose a sunbeam makes our own,
No more the surgeon hears the sufferer's groan;
What unwrit histories wrapped in darkness lay
Till shoveling science carted them to the day!
Your Richelieu says, and says it well, my lord,
The pen is sometimes mightier than the sword;
Great is the rocking spade, say we all—Amen.
Sometimes the spade is mightier than the pen;
It shows where Babel's terraced walls were raised,
The slabs that cracked when Nimrod's palace blazed,
Unearths Mycenæ, and scours Troy,
Calmly he listens that immortal boy.
A new Prometheus tips our wands with fire,
A mightier Orpheus strains the whispering wire,
Whose lightning thrills the lazy winds outrun
And hold the hours as Joshua stayed the sun,—
So swift, in truth, we hardly find a place
For those dim fictions known as time and space.
Still a new miracle each year supplies,
See at his work the chemist of the skies,
Who questions Sirius in his tortured rays
And steals the secret of the solar blaze.
Hush! while the window-rattling bugles play
The nation's airs a hundred miles away!
That wicked phonograph! hark! how it swears!
Turn it again and make it say its prayers!
And it was true, then, what the story said
Of Oxford's friar and his brazen head?
While wondering science stands, herself perplexed
At each day's miracle, and asks "what next?"
The immortal boy, the coming heir of all,
Springs from his desk to "urge the flying ball,"
Cleaves with his bending oar the glassy waves,
With sinewy arms the dashing current braves,
The same bright creature in these haunts of ours
That Eton shadowed with her "antique towers."
Boy! Where is he? the long-limbed youth inquires;
Whom his rough chin with manly pride inspires;
Ah, when the ruddy cheek no longer glows
When the bright hair is white as Winter snows,
When the dim eye has lost its lambent flame,
Sweet to his ear will be his schoolboy name!
Nor think the difference mighty as it seems
Between life's morning and its evening dreams;
Fourscore, like twenty, has its tasks and toys;
In earth's wide schoolhouse all are girls and boys.
Brothers, forgive my wayward fancy. Who
Can guess beforehand what his pen will do?
Too light my strain for listeners such as these,
Whom graver thoughts and soberer speech shall please.
Is he not here whose breath of holy song
Has raised the downcast eye of faith so long?
Are they not here, the strangers in your gates,
For whom the wearied ear impatient waits,—
The large-brained scholars whom their toils release,
The bannered heralds of the Prince of Peace?
Such was the gentle friend whose youth unblamed
In years long past our student benches claimed;
Whose name, illumined on the sacred page,
Lives in the labors of his riper age;
Such he whose record Time's destroying march
Leaves uneffaced on Zion's springing arch:
Not to the scanty phrase of measured song,
Cramped in its fetters, names like these belong;
One ray they lend to gild my slender line.—
Their praise I leave to sweeter lips than mine.
Home of our sires, where learning's temple rose,
While yet they struggled with their banded foes,
As in the West by century's sun descends,
One parting gleam its dying radiance lends,
Darker and deeper though the shadows fall
From the gray towers on Doubting Castle's wall,
Though Pope and Pagan re-array their hosts,
And her new armor youthful Science boasts,
Truth, for whose altar rose this holy shrine,
Shall fly for refuge to these bowers of thine;
No past shall chain her with its rusted vow,
No Jew's phylactery bind her Christian brow,
But Faith shall smile to find her sister free
And nobler manhood draw its life from thee.
Long as the arching skies above thee spread,—
As on thy groves the dews of heaven are shed,
With currents widening still from year to year,
And deepening channels, calm, untroubled, clear,
Flow the twin streamlets from thy sacred hill—
Pieria's fount and Siloam's shaded rill!

In local business circles the dull season of summer has not yet set in, but the volume of transactions has begun to show some falling off. The ample monetary supply gives assurance of a fair movement of the crops after harvest, but until then we may look for a period of inactivity. The predictions made by some who claim more than ordinary foresight in financial matters, that a marked reduction in interest rates would occur during the spring months, seems destined to prove false. At least it has not yet come about, and the season when the call for moving the large grain crop of the country is so near at hand that its consummation now would be unexpected. The supply in general circulation is quite as large as usual, and considerable sums are on the market for investment, but rates are steadily maintained. Remittances from the interior are a little slow at present, and some dealers in a small way are pressed to make both ends meet, on account of the want of promptness on the part of their creditors But on the whole the business situation is one of safety, and no rush into bankruptcy is likely to be caused by the fact that but two months are yet to elapse before it will be too late to pay debts in that way.

English Crops and Markets.

LONDON, June 25.—The Mark Lane Express says: Despite the somewhat conflicting nature of agricultural advices, the present situation of cereal crops is highly critical. Nothing but a continuance of normal weather can prevent another addition to the succession of unproductive, unremunerative seasons. With the exception of France where the wheat plant has suffered almost as much as in this country, continental advices promise a fair average yield; but in Eastern Russia thousands of acres of grain have been cut to pieces by a succession of unusually heavy hail storms. Deliveries of English wheat at the principal provincial markets have shown a decided falling off. Offerings at Mark Lane are also light, which tend to prove a depletion of stocks in farmers' hands, depressed by heavy present and prospective supplies and flooded with continued offers from America and Russia. The foreign wheat trade has been reduced almost to stagnation; prices receded fully a shilling on the week, with only a most limited consumptive demand at that. The continental demand for cargoes of wheat off coast has been the most noteworthy feature of the week

New York Freights and Markets.

NEW YORK, June 25.—In the freight market there is no material change to note. Shipments are mainly from regular shippers who have some goods contracted for some time since, and they are now going foward. Aside from this there is very little doing. Rates keep pretty steady, although one or two lots of heavy goods have been placed on the St John Smith at the old figures, as it is the desire of agents of this vessel to get her off this month. Markets remain quiet. Flour, a little better demand and steady; wheat active for export at 1@2 off, but closed dull and weak at the lowest prices of the day with still less bid. Wool continues very dull, and the position of buyers and sellers remains much the same as for weeks past.

DR. PAUL M. BRENAN.

His Wonderful Success

IN THE TREATMENT OF ALL

Chronic and Difficult Diseases,

He has astonished the People of this Coast by his skillful Operations.

HE HAS TAUGHT IN HIS

public and private lectures the true principles of health and life to both male and female. He has also warned them against habits that would be likely to produce disease, in plain and comprehensive language. But where he has found them crushed and broken down by disease, mentally and physically, he has restored them to health and happiness, for it is well understood that without health there can be no happiness.

has made a specialty in the treatment of the following diseases: Catarrh, Bronchitis, and all diseases of the throat and chest, by an entirely new system only known to himself. Diseases of the Kidneys and Urinary Organs, including Spermatorrhea, Seminal Weakness or premature loss of Manhood. In the treatment of these diseases he has made a world wide reputation by his astonishing success, not only on this Coast but throughout the whole United States. Diseases of the stomach, bowels, liver and kidneys as well as all diseases of the blood and skin he has become master of, and never fails to give relief at once, and permanently cures the case if he is applied to in time.

THE DOCTOR HAS GIVEN SPECIAL LECTURES to ladies only for years and is perfectly familiar with all female complaints, and understands their delicate and refined organization, as well as the proper remedies which should be used to allay their suffering and restore them to perfect health.

THE DOCTOR HAS THIS ADVANTAGE

over most physicians—he can tell the patients' disease the moment he comes in contact with them without any aid from the individual. This accounts in part for his great professional success.

All surgical operations can be performed by his skillful hand, and the patient need not fear the result.

will send to those living at a distance and who cannot well visit his office a list of Printed Questions and by the answers when filled out he can tell the disease as well as the proper treatment almost as well as seeing the patient personally, and will forward the proper medicines, or instruments, to any part of the country with full instructions and advice. Each letter requiring advice or list of questions, must contain two postage stamps.

Everything strictly confidential and honorable.

THE DOCTOR

has studied in the best Medical Schools in Europe and three years in the Jefferson Medical College at Philadelphia, as more than one of the Medical men of the Medical Faculty in this State can testify.

CAUTION.

Persons coming to Portland, requiring medical treatment of the proper kind, who desire to consult with me, will please beware of persons who may try to coax them away to other so-called Doctors, through pretended friendship for the patients. Look out for them; they are knaves, prompted by selfish motives and what they can make. Be sure and ask for DR. PAUL M. BRENAN, the Medical Lecturer, and read his sign on his door.
